

MERRY
— AS A — GRIG!

CHRISTMAS

Though the Summer-time is past, and the jolly little Crickets no longer chirp their merry songs, there is something merrier still to replace the sound of mirth, for now the children are singing :

"Santa Claus is coming, Santa Claus is Almost Here!"

Yes indeed, old Santa is almost here, and in advance of his coming, to save the hard work he would have to do if he waited till the Stockings were all hung up by the fireside, he has sent a big lot of his intended Gifts ahead by "Reindeer Express," and they are on view at SULZER'S.

HEAR THE CHILDREN LAUGH!

Doesn't it make you feel young again? Father, with the gray showing in your hair and beard, you look like Santa! Are you going to carry the resemblance still farther? You know what we mean. Come in and see us! Let us whisper, oh, so carefully and mysteriously! We mustn't let the children catch us at it, for the World! Drop into our store, as if by accident, you know!

What are the SWEET Chimes saying?

Listen! you can almost Hear the words!

Yes, you have caught the Real Meaning!

CHIMES

The chimes are telling you just what Santa Claus has sent to Cloverport, and what he expects you will do to carry out his wishes; for every stroke of the Christmas Bells is plain enough. The clear strokes say:

DOTTING OVER A GOWN

HENRIETTE ROUSSEAU RAVES OVER A NEW DEPARTURE.

Something to Make Young Ladies' Bivins Dazzle—More Velvet For Costumes. Latest in Women's—The Climates to Headgear—Fashion to Face.

For women who are active and quick of motion and sprightly in manner a loose tea gown is an agony and a misery. For a loose gown requires slow and measured movements, otherwise it will swallow about the form in the most awkward fashion. Recognizing the needs of such ladies there has been devised a new departure, and now the lady who needs such a model can have her tea gown as she likes and not be worse than out of the world—entirely of fashion.

One was just finished yesterday for a prominent young married lady. It was made princess, with a short train in the back, which was cut so that the back broadly fell very full in natural folds. It was of satin dressed brocade, large green, with queer, large figures in olive white.

The new wooden seem to have all broken out into tufts and spots, which stand above the surface. One gown of such material pleased me greatly. It had a dull blue ground, and lines of irregularly spaced tufts of copper red crossed each other in such a manner as to form large plaids. The skirt was quite plain, tailor finished and rather shorter than usually seen. The sleeves were large, the waist a plain pointed baguette, with the buttons diagonally placed. There was a short train of copper velvet, with a spring collar of blue velvet just the shade of the groundwork of the dress. The last matched it in color. A lady came in and sat down and hated the owner of this dress with all her might and wished the latter might die before she wore the gown, so that she might have one just like it and be the only one to wear it.

Is there anything new in head gear? Some one asks. Well, not very much. The felt plateaus are being twisted into new and unheard of shapes and trimmed in the most daring manner. Nothing comes into the trimming of bonnet, far and feather, flowers, lace, jet ribbons and velvet—all are seen this season. But the climax has been reached, I think when one courageous milliner made a tiny bonnet of a large hat, with its uply head in front, and its big ears standing up and its wings folded over the crown.

The majority of bonnets are made of velvet and jet, with occasional winging of silver or some other light fancy for trimming. The little girls have a great variety of hats and poke bonnets made of the colored felt plateaus, twisted and bent into the shape found most becoming. One of cardinal felt was bent and plaited into a sort of entangled poke and trimmed with a fall bow of cardinal velvet ribbon, and there were strings to tie it with. A Mother Hubbard coat of cardinal cloth, with velvet yoke, was worn with such a hat and was very pretty indeed. Some hats have floral trimming, but for winter other trimming looks rather more suitable. It is probable that short, ostrich type will be much worn during the winter, and many heads of small animals, with bonneting of the same fur. One lady had upright sable tails on her purple velvet bonnet, which was a large poke, with the brim faced with like line and lined with cream lace. There were bows of ribbon on the outside, too, and wide purple velvet strings.

The amount of fur used and to be used as garniture on home and street toilets this season almost passes belief. Everything is bordered or otherwise ornamented with it, even the most imprudent.

This winter, now advancing rapidly, we'll see more velvet worn as gowns and full costumes than there has been for thirty years. This is due to two reasons. The velvets came in naturally with the present styles and seem to belong to them by right. Next, importers loaded themselves with velvets and velvins, and then hard times came on, which forced the importers to sell their wares at a sacrifice of the cost of importation, and that put these ideal goods within the reach of every one. Now capes and cloaks are made of it—velvins, preferably, unless one can afford the best velvet. The rich corded and shotted effects are almost wonderful, and the two toned styles are beautiful.

Some of them break into four and five shades of the two contrasting colors, and yet if you examine closely you'll find that there are but two colors, one shade of each. Cardinal and blue give purple effects as well as the two colors named in one piece. The cheaper grades of silk faced velvet do not produce the right effect. It is somehow lacking in the heavy fold. The new velvins are thick and fold in rich round folds that would delight an artist. There were one pattern of soft moss green over steel pink and another of the same green over salmon, and words cannot tell how handsomely it made up in a deep mantle lined with satin and trimmed with fur. Another had dark green surface, shotted with cardinal. Another wore blue and gold, and in fact the line is as complete as the Lyons velvet, which it resembles closely. The ribbed velvins and velvins, with underlying color in contrast, are magnificent.

One corset velvina was of fawn and pink—the rise of fawn on the under color pink. The whole effect was exquisite. Many of the darker shades of brown corded or corset velvins have underlying colors, which light up the whole, though some are all of one color for those who prefer. I saw a novelty in this line which shows a craze effect on velvins, giving several apparent shades to one single color. It is indescribably rich. Mrs. Gould had a beautiful gown for afternoon made of pure velvet corded velvins. It was cut princess, with long juice sleeves, lined with shirmp pink with green stripes. The gown was the tender rose shade. The front opened over an underdrift of pink crape of the same shade and bordered at the foot with a wide band of pink catfish plumes. There was a collar of the same at the neck, and at the waist there was a silver chain with a fringed bar at the ends, which hung loosely, somewhat like a lion's head. Altogether it was a dainty gown.

The new wooden seem to have all broken out into tufts and spots, which stand above the surface. One gown of such material pleased me greatly. It had a dull blue ground, and lines of irregularly spaced tufts of copper red crossed each other in such a manner as to form large plaids. The skirt was quite plain, tailor finished and rather shorter than usually seen. The sleeves were large, the waist a plain pointed baguette, with the buttons diagonally placed. There was a short train of copper velvet, with a spring collar of blue velvet just the shade of the groundwork of the dress. The last matched it in color. A lady came in and sat down and hated the owner of this dress with all her might and wished the latter might die before she wore the gown, so that she might have one just like it and be the only one to wear it.

FRANK L. MONTGOMERY.

Hon. A. B. Montgomery
A SKETCH OF HIS VALUABLE PUBLIC CAREER.
A Leader of the House of Representatives.
His Opinion Is Asked
On Every Important Subject.

KENTUCKY NOTED MEN.

The Southern States Monthly Magazine of Baltimore, Md., in giving a sketch of noted Southern statesmen has this to say of our own honorable representative:

Alexander B. Montgomery, representative of the fourth district of Kentucky, is one of the silent leaders of the House, seldom speaking on the floor, never allowing an interview, modest, unobtrusive, yet impressing his personality on every bill of legislation coming before Congress. He has many of the characteristics of Gorman, with the integrity of the Speaker, one of whose closest friends he is.

It was when Mr. Crisp was making his fight for the chair that Montgomery first became an important factor in the politics of the House. Standing aloof from the convictions of his State and his own constituency, he was one of the first men from his section of the country to declare for the Georgian. With great odds against him he soon had the majority of his own delegation in line and working in his silent way, because one of the most important factors in the House.

In recognition of his ability and services he was given a chairmanship and placed high on the Committee on Ways and Means. It is here that his best work has been done. He is particularly conservative, never allowing sectional or personal prejudice to mar his judgment or warp his vision.

His physical appearance is indicative of his inner self. Tall as the proverbial arrow, straight as the conventional razor, he passes through the halls of Congress a conspicuous figure. He is the picture of the farmer and the judge, a mingling of the rustic and the judiciary. "What does Montgomery think?" is a common question to him on every floor, and so often his advice is sought and as often taken. He has that peculiar faculty of differing with men without wounding their egotism. He never voluntarily offers advice, but when it is asked gives it straight without fear of consequences.

He is a Kentuckian with all the local pride which seems inherent in the natives of the Blue Grass State. He is a good churchman, a good houseman and understands the finest points of Bourbon whiskey. He was born on a farm in Harlan county in 1832, where he has always resided. He was given a collegiate education at Georgetown College, Kentucky, graduating in 1853. In 1851 he graduated from the Louisville law school, but returned to his farm and lived the life of a planter. In 1870 he was called from the sickle to the bench and served as county judge until 1874. He then served in the State Senate from 1877 to 1881, and by an overwhelming vote was sent to the Fifth Congress; since then he has been returned each time without a rime opposition.

Liver and Kidney Cure
Parks-Sure Cure is the only guaranteed remedy. In action is quick and positive. Will stop that back-ache and sick-head-ache. A positive specific for all diseases of women. Why suffer when it will cure you? A. H. Fisher, druggist.

Women's Suffrage
As "coming events cast their shadows before," we are frequently asked there by to predict with certainty, what may be or shall be the future of our state or country. It took no prophet, twenty-five years before the Declaration of Independence, to foresee the struggle which would evidently ensue between the old and the new world. It did not require the vision of a seer a half a century ago, to tell what the United States as a government would not long stand with part for and part against African slavery.

Neither does it require that one of the old prophets shall rise from the dead and that a new one shall take his place to foresee that another great revolution will come upon our people and that the passing of many centuries, a change will be wrought in our citizenship. The new revolution will not be one of blood, no lives will be lost in the struggle, it will be one wrought by the change in the minds and sentiments of the people of a great country.

Whether we, the sterner sex, approve of it or not, whether it shall be a thing bettering or making worse our position is not a question that we shall close at present—but one thing is certain, and that is this, that women will some time, all over the United States, have the same rights and privileges granted to them as that accorded to the male of creation. In proof of this position we need no better than to refer to the changes that have taken place in public sentiment during the past twenty years. A quarter of a century ago it was a rare thing that a woman who had been in the schools of the State of Kentucky as a teacher, would then half the schools she taught by. These people, women are now engaged in all the offices, in banks and in nearly all the different trades and professions of life. They are found in the palatial preaching pulpits to a lot world, they are practicing medicine and healing the sick, in fact there is scarcely a profession at present that is not graced by her ladyship. By the laws of the state, eligible to at least one county office and several of these places are filled by her; while the last legislature conferred upon her equal rights before unheard of in the Commonwealth of Kentucky. One thing, if no more, must be said of her and in her behalf, she is a brave and noble woman. As a cashier she has never been known to run off with the money or to appropriate the earnings of her employer to unlawful purposes, and in her domestic life she is as gentle and as patient as a lamb. As a clerk, more polite and attentive to her duties than her male counterpart, and in business generally a better manager and more correct accountant, than he of the sterner sex. Women have proven themselves everywhere and on all occasions, where opportunity has offered, to be equal to almost any emergency that may arise. Queen Victoria, although a woman, has proven herself to be the most popular sovereign that ever sat upon a British throne. Henry Girard, a Frenchman, is the equal of a Vanderbilt. Francis Willard was a temperance lecturer, is the equal of the peerless Dale, while Mary Anderson, our Kentucky girl, has a reputation that will stand side by side with that of Booth or Jefferson. So it is with all the trades or professions where women have entered, and so it will continue to be for all time to come.

It does not pose as an advocate of "women's rights" or "women's suffrage." While we may ever oppose the further supposed encroachments upon the rights of man, yet that is no reason why we should not believe that it is only a question of time until she will have every right under the law that is accorded or guaranteed to her brother. She is the queen and all that she has to do is to command and her subjects obey. She will sometime make a name for herself, and when she does, then will we all with one accord, accede to her will, whether we want to or not—Madisonville Herald.

A Good Thing to Keep at Hand.

From the Troy (N.Y.) Chief.

Some years ago we were very much surprised to receive a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and from that time we have been its warm advocates. It is a good thing to keep at hand, and we have found it to be a very valuable remedy in all cases of colic, cholera and diarrhea. try from west to east during the 12th to 10th. The storm will not do the same then until after the moon's first quarter on the 10th, but colder, clearer weather will dominate the north and west long before it is felt along the Atlantic. The "weather train" at this and all other periods will pass all stations from west to east on about schedule. The storm period beginning about the 22nd and reaching to the 26th, promises many winter storms, and many sections will have their supplies of "Christmas snow" greatly replenished during the progress of these storms. The full moon is on the 22nd and will give the crisis early in the period. The Arctic wave following the storm will have brought very cold weather to much of the country by the night of the 26th. The equinox of Mercury is in effect with the full moon on the 22nd, which fact is almost a guarantee that heavy frost will be a characteristic feature of the period. At no point will the mercury fall below zero, and the month is apt to close with relatively warm weather, with a rising barometer and colder, clearing weather in sight in the north and west. Word and Works.

For a lame back or a pain in the side or chest, try saturating a piece of flannel with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and holding it on the diseased part. This treatment will cure any ordinary case in one or two days. Pain Balm also cures rheumatism, 50-cent bottle for sale by A. B. Fisher, Cloverport and Witt & Meador, Harlanburg.
